Subject: [Isps.all] An update on ISPS's role within the evolving Yale response
Attachments: ATT00001.txt

To the ISPS community,

I hope this note finds you well as you adjust to a fluid situation. At this critical moment, I am particularly grateful for the dedication of our amazing staff.

Fortunately, most of the staff have been able to work at home or at our alternate location (238 Prospect Street), which we arranged due to potential construction disruptions. As always, staff will continue to support ISPS and can be reached via email and Zoom. I can also be reached via email: jacob.hacker@yale.edu.

I know that some ISPS affiliates are continuing to spend time at 77 Prospect Street. Please note the building will have limited access and limited custodial service for the foreseeable future. In addition, please follow the guidelines issued by the university, in particular:

- Self-monitoring daily, and staying home if you are unwell (created March 12)
- Limiting size of on-campus meetings and events (created March 7, updated March 12)
- Discouraging visitors from coming to campus (created March 12)
- Following CDC travel and health guidance (created March 2, updated March 12)
- Limiting international and domestic travel (created March 10)

Most offices at Yale will continue to operate during and after the break. Please note in particular:

- The Poorvu Center is supporting academic continuity during this time: <https://poorvucenter.yale.edu/academic-continuity>
- The StatLab will continue to hold drop-in consultation hours via Zoom. Check the calendar for updates. (The consultant on duty will greet you when you enter the meeting, but you may have to wait if they are currently assisting another

Above all, please stay safe. We are grateful for your patience with us as we adapt to evolving realities.

With All Best Wishes,

Jacob
